Series 2: Chickasaw National Records

Introduction

An agreement between the Chickasaws and Choctaws signed at Doaksville on Jan. 17, 1837 (11 Stats., 573) permitted the Chickasaws to settle in the Choctaw Nation with all the rights of Choctaw citizens. A further provision created an area to be set aside as the Chickasaw District, the land to be held in common by the two tribes. Residents of the District were to have equal representation in the Choctaw General Council and were to be governed by the laws of the Choctaw Nation.

This arrangement proved to be an unsatisfactory one for the Chickasaws. In 1855 another treaty was signed at Washington (11 Stats., 611) giving the Chickasaws the unrestricted right of self-government and defining the boundaries of the Chickasaw Nation. In 1856 and 1857, constitutions were adopted with the government being organized into three departments. The executive authority was vested in the office of Governor and the legislative in a Senate and House of Representatives. A Supreme Court was established as well as District and County Courts. This form of government was retained until the advent of statehood for Oklahoma.

The original counties of the Chickasaw District were Panola, Wichita, Caddo, and Perry. When the Chickasaw Nation proper was organized under the Treaty of 1855, the country was again divided into four counties called from that time onward Panola, Pickens, Tishomingo, and Pontotoc.

In 1893, Congress provided for the creation of the Commission to the Five Civilized Tribes (Dawes Commission) and authorized this body to meet with representatives of the tribes, including the Chickasaws. This effort met with resistance and rejection. It was not until Apr. 23, 1897, under the Atoka Agreement, that the Chickasaws finally consented to the provisions of allotment of their lands in severalty. Then in 1898, the Curtis Act, into which the Atoka Agreement was incorporated was made federal law. The act provided that a census of the tribes, Chickasaw, Choctaw, Cherokee, Creek, and Seminole, should be taken to determine those individuals who were citizens of each tribe. It was necessary to acquire many of the national records of the tribes involved in order to carry out the responsibilities of the Commission. These records were taken from the various national repositories to Muskogee where the main Commission office was located. The Curtis Act also provided that the five governments be abolished on Mar. 6, 1906 prior to Oklahoma statehood. However at this time the work of the Commission was not completed, and an Act of Congress, Apr. 26, 1906, provided for the continuance of the tribal governments with limited autonomy.

The records, dating from 1860-1906, which were later stored in the federal building in Muskogee came to the attention of Dr. Grant Foreman. He believed that there were of great historical value and that they should be inventoried, put in some order and placed where they would be accessible to historians. He gained the permission of the Indian Office to direct the calendaring of the documents in 1929. Later he and others were instrumental in having the collection placed in the Oklahoma Historical Building in Oklahoma City. An Act of Congress on Mar. 27, 1934 (H. R. 5631 Public No. 133) transferred the records to the care of the Oklahoma Historical Society, although ownership remained with the federal government.

It was determined that the categories for the unbound Chickasaw documents would be as follows:

Agricultural Leases	Census	Panola County
Attorneys	Citizenship	Pickens County
Buildings	Constables	Pontotoc County
Cattle	Courts-District	Miscellaneous

Estates and Guardianships:	Big Springs National	Yellow Spring

Mrs. Rella Watts, later Rella Looney (Archivist, 1929-1974) divided the Chickasaw records into these categories and filed them chronologically within each category.

The 106 bound volumes for the Chickasaw Nation comprise manuscript records of such material as journals of the Senate and House of Representatives, treasurers' accounts, census, court cases, marriages, permits to non-citizens, schools, constitutions, laws, and lists of members of the legislature and national officers.

The Chickasaw volumes, many of which are rebound, sometimes have several different titles: a spine title, a front cover title, an inside page title. The Indian Archives numbered title will be given first in identification, then the original title or titles if present.

Chickasaw volumes often contain a variety of different entries. These will be briefly outlined on a contents page for each volume filmed.

Another group of Chickasaw records found in Section X of the Archives. These are not part of the collection acquired by the Act of 1934, but are documents which have come to the Historical Society since that time by gift of purchase.

The national records of the Chickasaw Nation are considered valuable because they represent, along with the national tribal records of the Cherokee, Choctaw, Creek, and Seminole Nations, the largest group of records of sovereign Indian nations known to exist to this date. As such, they give a view of Indian history that is unknown for other American Indian tribes who did not have constitutional governments and written records.

National Archives Roll 7RA27.1

Federal Archives and Records Center – Fort Worth, TX – Record Group 75: Records of the Bureau of Indian Affairs, Records of the Choctaw-Chickasaw Citizenship Court

◆ Records of the Choctaw-Chickasaw Citizenship Roll

- “Choctaw Court Claimants. A list of persons applicants for enrollment to the Commission to the Five Civilized Tribes who have been admitted to Citizenship in the Choctaw Nation by judgments of the United States Court for the Central and Southern Districts, Indian Territory and which judgments were vacated by a degree of the Choctaw-Chickasaw Citizenship Court: Dec. 17, 1902.”
- The establishment of the Choctaw-Chickasaw Citizenship Court was authorized by Section 31 of an act of Congress of July 1, 1902. The act authorized either tribe to fill a bill of equity in the Citizenship Court to seek the annulment and vacation of decisions of the U. S. Courts in Indian Territory under the act of Congress of June 10, 1896. The Citizenship Court vacated all of the judgements rendered by the U. S. Courts on Dec. 17, 1902. Applicants for citizenship who had been admitted or rejected by the U. S. Courts were required to institute proceedings in the Citizenship Court. Cases appealed from the U. S. Court for the Central District of Indian Territory were heard by the Citizenship Court sitting in South McAlester while cases appealed from the U. S. Court for the Southern District of Indian Territory were heard on Tishomingo.
- An act of Congress of Mar. 3, 1903 provided for the termination of the Court on Dec. 31, 1904 and the transfer of all record to the Dawes Commission. The Citizenship Court heard 256 cases and admitted 161 persons while denying the applications of 2,792.

◆ Choctaw and Chickasaw Citizenship Claimants: 1902

- There are separate lists for Choctaws and Chickasaws. Within each list, the names of applicants are arranged alphabetically. Carbon copies of typed lists of claimants who had been admitted to citizenship by the U. S. Courts and perfected appeals to the Citizenship Court. The information given for each claimant includes sex, age, degree of blood, Dawes enrollment card number, U. S. Court case numbers, Citizenship Court case number, and some remarks relating to decisions of the Citizenship Court.

◆ Records of the Choctaw-Chickasaw Citizenship Court

- Both the Choctaw and Chickasaw tribal governments strongly objected to the enrollment activities of the Dawes Commission. Section 31 of an act of Congress of July 1, 1902 (32 Stat. 641), established a Choctaw-Chickasaw Citizenship Court (CCCC) and authorized either tribe to file a bill in equity before the court to seek annulment of decisions that had been made by the United States District Courts in the Indian Territory under an act of June 10, 1896 (29 Stat. 321). President Roosevelt appointed Spencer B. Adams, Henry S. Foote, and Walter L. Weaver to the CCCC, which rendered a decision on Dec. 17, 1902 in the case of the Choctaw and Chickasaw Nations or Tribes v. J. T. Riddle, et.al., which vacated all judgments of the U. S. District Courts for the Central and Southern Districts of the Indian Territory. Persons involved in those decisions were required to institute proceedings in the CCCC to regain enrollment. Cases originating in the U. S. District Court for the Central District were heard by the CCCC at South McAlester and cases from the Southern District at Tishomingo.
- An act of Congress of Mar. 3, 1903 (32 Stat. 982), provided for the termination of the Choctaw-Chickasaw Citizenship Court on Dec. 31, 1904 and the transfer of all records to the Dawes Commission. The CCCC eventually heard 256 cases involving 3487 people admitted only 161 to citizenship. See Loren N. Brown, “The Choctaw-Chickasaw Court Citizens,” The Chronicles of Oklahoma (Vol. 16, Number 4).
