“A Portrait of a President: An Evening with Lincoln”

Imagine Abraham Lincoln brought to life and reciting his eloquent speeches again. In commemoration of the Civil War, and specifically the 150th anniversary of the Battle of Honey Springs, Fritz Klein will portray Abraham Lincoln relating to the Civil War through President Lincoln’s eyes. The program on Tuesday, October 8, at 7 p.m. will explore how a president perseveres while trying to reassure a nation in the midst of Civil War.

Klein has portrayed Abraham Lincoln from coast to coast, presenting educational programs for schools, civic organizations, and major living history programs for more than twenty years. He has performed at prestigious programs for the Abraham Lincoln Presidential Library, Mount Rushmore, the Pentagon, and the Oklahoma History Center. The Oklahoma Historical Society and the Friends of Honey Springs Battlefield will sponsor this performance about Lincoln’s presidency and the Civil War. This event was made possible by a grant from the Oklahoma Humanities Council and will be held at the Checotah Junior High School auditorium at 320 West Jefferson in Checotah. For more information, contact Christopher Price at 918/473-5572.

Home School Day

The Oklahoma History Center will host the Fifth Annual Home School Day on Monday, October 14, from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m.

Home School Day at the History Center is designed to offer family learners the chance to participate in a program specifically designed for mixed age groups. Activities run throughout the day, allowing participants to stop by at any time. The museum will offer a hands-on adventure into Oklahoma’s past. Visitors can explore the museum with the help of gallery guides, follow along with a scavenger hunt, take part in hands-on demonstrations, and enjoy a variety of historical interpreters. Visitors will find activities and demonstrations throughout the galleries.

Home School Day is designed for family learners and home school groups to come, experience, and do! No registration is required. Best of all, admission to the program is free. The museum offers a number of outdoor picnic areas or you can drop by the Winnie Mae Café during your visit for lunch. For more information please contact Jason Harris at jharris@okhistory.org or by phone at 405/522-0785.

Murrell Home Ghost Stories

On Friday, October 25, at 6:30 p.m. visitors will hear scary tales from storytellers in nineteenth-century costume at the George M. Murrell Home. Several stories will be told inside the house and cider and cookies will be provided in the smokehouse. Reservations are required. A donation of $5 per person is requested. Tours will run every fifteen minutes beginning at 6:30 p.m. The last tour begins at 8:30 p.m. The Murrell Home is located at 19479 E. Murrell Home Road in Park Hill. To make reservations or for more information call 918/456-2751.

Ghost tours at Fort Washita

From October 23 to 26 a walking tour of Fort Washita will feature ghostly tales told by veteran storyteller and historical reenactor Steve Abolt. The stories will occur at 7, 8:30, and 10 p.m. nightly. Guests will be treated to numerous stories, both old and new, while enjoying a candlelit tour of the historic site. Reservations are required and admission is $10 per visitor. To make reservations or for questions, call 580/924-6502. Fort Washita is located at 3348 State Road in Durant.
In a recent conversation with George Records, I was listing the qualities needed to be a leader at the Oklahoma Historical Society. After I went through my list, which included content knowledge, people skills, marketing skills, and structure, George looked at me and calmly said I had left out the most important quality: passion. He is right. Passion for history, whether it is preserving buildings, collecting artifacts, or sharing information, can carry the day when funding is short or forty hours are already on the books. Fortunately for us, the OHS has had a long roster of employees and volunteers who have a passion for history.

Two good examples have been on my mind the last couple of weeks. One is Whit Edwards, who is facing a real challenge in his life. I met Whit about 1985 when I was editor of The Chronicles of Oklahoma. He lived in my inner-city, transitional neighborhood where a lot of us Baby Boomers were raising our families and enjoying the adventure of historic homes. I also played full-contact basketball with him at the Downtown YMCA where blood was evidence of a foul. Of course, he excelled with those rules.

When I was assigned the duty of coordinating the first reenactment at Honey Springs Battlefield, Whit came to the site to offer his help. He said he would be in the ranks during the battle, but more importantly, he wanted to work at the OHS and develop our educational programs.

In 1989, as Blake Wade and I were rebuilding the staff, I found a way to hire Whit. He reached out to the reenactor community, found partners in surprising places, and built an educational program that brought history to life for thousands of students and adults.

I could never give him adequate resources. I could never stretch the hours in a week to give him enough time. Still, Whit launched himself time after time into the projects that would open the doors of history to others. His book on the Civil War in Indian Territory sold out and will be reprinted soon. The museum at Honey Springs will open in 2015. And his legacy of education is carried on by those who recognized his talent.

The other example of passion for history is Dr. John Carmichael, who recently passed from this earth a couple of weeks ago at the age of 91.

Dr. John was a dentist in Woodward who is the godfather of Fort Supply Historic Site. From 1987 to a month ago, I enjoyed every visit with John, whether it was talking about his latest discovery or a plan to tackle a new project.

John’s passion for history carried the day numerous times, whether it was convincing the Corrections Department to let prisoners march as soldiers in parades or building a replica of the log stockade at Fort Supply. John is one of my heroes.

Yes, many qualities are needed to be a leader at the OHS. First is passion for history.
Awards

On Saturday, August 17, Grace Episcopal Church in Muskogee was presented the Historic Preservation Award by the Three Rivers Museum. The award was given in recognition of the church’s significant contribution to the preservation of Muskogee’s historic landmarks. Located at 218 North Sixth Street, the church was established on February 23, 1893. The current church building was completed in 1906. In the early 1920s, because of oil and railroad booms, Grace experienced an increase in attendance. The church was cut in half, moved by mules and log rollers to the other end of Sixth Street, and extended in size. This 120-year-old building is the oldest church building in Muskogee and it is the only Gothic Revival Architecture church in Muskogee. Grace is the only church in Muskogee that has been in the same building, on the same piece of property, with the same name and same religion, since prior to statehood. Moving the church building itself is considered a historic event, brought on by other historic events; however, the church itself is not eligible for placement on the State and National Register of Historic Places because its orientation was changed ninety years ago. For more information, contact Jennifer Sparks at Jennifer.Sparks1@va.gov.

Events

General meetings of the Oklahoma Genealogical Society are held on the first Monday of each month in the Chesapeake Event Center at the Oklahoma History Center in Oklahoma City. Monthly programs are free for all members of the Oklahoma Genealogical Society. Non-members are welcome, but are charged $5 to attend each program. The OGS meetings begin at 6 and finish at 7:45 p.m. On October 7 Debra Spindle will present information regarding hiring a professional genealogist. For more information visit http://okgensoc.org/.

Visit the historic Mattie Beal Home in Lawton. She was a twenty-two-year-old telephone operator in Wichita, Kansas, registered for the 1901 land lottery in El Reno, Oklahoma Territory. Martha Helen “Mattie” Beal’s name was the second one drawn in the Lawton Land District that July and she claimed her 160 acres. She married Charles W. Payne in July 1902, the part owner of a lumberyard in Lawton from whom she had purchased the lumber needed to construct her small two-room house. In 1907 she and Charles began building a Neoclassical Greek Revival-style mansion. This fourteen-room house with attic and basement was completed in about 1909. In 1923 the Paynes undertook a major remodeling, reflecting a popular architectural style now known as Art Deco. Mattie Beal Payne died in 1931 and Charles Payne sold the home in 1939. During the 1940s the home was divided into apartments. By 1970 it had fallen victim to vandalism and neglect and faced demolition. In 1973 concerned citizens formed the Lawton Heritage Association (LHA) to save this historic structure. LHA purchased it and began restoration. In 1975, the Historic Mattie Beal Home was listed on the National Register of Historic Places. Located at Fifth and Summit in Lawton, the historic Mattie Beal Home is open to the public for tours Thursday through Sunday from noon to 3 p.m. There is an admission fee. The home is also available for weddings, receptions, meetings, luncheons, group and school tours, and photo shoots. For more information, call 580/678-3156 or visit www.LawtonHeritage.org.

The event will be held annually during the month of October and this year will occur on October 26 from 11 a.m. to 3 p.m. This year’s event will feature the Major County Historical Society’s antique tractors and farm machinery, the Southwest Dairy Farmer’s Mobile Dairy Classroom, a petting farm yard, pie auction, calf roping, pumpkin carving, and a variety of hands-on agricultural activities such as grinding wheat, shelling corn, and making rope. For more information, call 405/237-1907 or email csrhcinfo@okhistory.org.

OHS digitizes historical newspapers

The National Endowment for the Humanities (NEH) has awarded a third grant of $300,000 to the Oklahoma Historical Society to develop an internet-based, searchable database of newspapers from Oklahoma. According to Chad Williams, director of the Research Division, the OHS has placed more than 200,000 newspaper pages on the internet with the earlier NEH grants. “This rich digital resource will be maintained permanently at the Library of Congress,” said Williams. “These titles reflect the state’s political, cultural, and economic history from the 1850s to the 1920s.”

The OHS is also digitizing all other pre-1923 Oklahoma newspapers with a grant funded by the Ethics and Excellence in Journalism Foundation. Currently there are 681,474 Oklahoma newspaper pages available for viewing on the Gateway to Oklahoma History website. When completed, the two grant projects will allow the OHS to provide word-searchable, free access to all pre-1923 Oklahoma newspapers in the collections of the OHS. The newspapers are word-searchable and available at http://gateway.okhistory.org/ and http://chroniclingamerica.loc.gov/. For more information contact Chad Williams at chadw@okhistory.org.

William D. Fossett exhibit at the Chisholm Trail Museum

The Chisholm Trail Museum is proud to announce a unique exhibit on display. This exhibit showcases several rare artifacts related to former US Marshal William D. Fossett. The exhibit, William D. Fossett, a Legacy, features items and rare artifacts from the Chisholm Trail, the 1889 Land Run, and the infamous outlaw era of the Oklahoma Territory years. William D. Fossett, a cowboy, first land claimant in Kingfisher, and US marshal for Oklahoma Territory, lived and participated in the same era in which the City of Kingfisher was founded during the Land Run of 1889 and in which the Seay Mansion in Kingfisher was built and occupied by pre-statehood Oklahoma territorial governor A. J. Seay. William D. Fossett and other cattlemen used the famous Chisholm Trail that ran through Kingfisher and Kingfisher County to drive cattle from Texas to Kansas.

Bill Fossett, the youngest son of Irish immigrants, was born in 1851 and migrated with his family at an early age to New York, Wisconsin, Minnesota, Kansas, and eventually Kingfisher, Oklahoma, where he made his permanent residence. As a young man Bill Fossett worked as a cowboy on the Chisholm Trail, where his fellow cowboys were shot and killed by bandits, after which he gathered a posse and eventually killed the bandits. After serving as a law man in Caldwell, Kansas, Fossett made the Land Run of 1889 in Kingfisher, where he became the first land claimant in Kingfisher’s history.

Fossett’s reputation as a law man elevated after he shot and killed a train robber on the Rock Island Railroad in 1884. The robber, Bob Hughes, was allegedly a former member of the infamous Jesse James gang. The exhibit showcases the original gun and holster taken from the robber at the time of his death. Visitors will observe the original bullet hole and blood stain still visible on the robber’s holster from the attempted train robbery. Fossett’s reputation as a fearless and courageous lawmaker led to his appointment as chief deputy marshal for Oklahoma Territory in 1887, and then to the top US marshal’s post under appointment by President Theodore Roosevelt in 1902. President Roosevelt honored Fossett in person by stating: “I’ve had a good deal of trouble with my marshal appointments in Oklahoma . . . but I made no mistake when I appointed Mr. Fossett.”

After touring the Bill Fossett exhibit, visitors will enjoy two other new displays recently unveiled: a new American Indian exhibit showcasing rare artifacts such as beaded moccasins, vests, and photographs of the Cheyenne Arapaho tribes, and a Kingfisher Oklahoma Territorial exhibit, which showcases an original journal on loan from the Oklahoma Historical Society from the second territorial governor of Oklahoma Territory, A. J. Seay. In addition to these new exhibits, located on the museum grounds is an original log cabin that was owned by the Dalton family. Residing in this cabin was Adalene Dalton, mother of the notorious brothers of the Dalton gang. It is thought that the Dalton brothers visited their mother in this very cabin on several occasions, and possibly prior to the infamous Coffeyville, Kansas, raid in which the Dalton’s were gunned down in an attempt to rob two banks at the same time.

For more information about the Kingfisher Chisholm Trail Museum and to follow upcoming events and programs, please visit www.ctokmuseum.org or like its Facebook page. The Governor Seay Mansion and Chisholm Trail Museum are located at 605 Zellers Avenue in Kingfisher. The museum is open on Tuesdays to Saturdays from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Admission is $4 for adults and $2 for children. For more information, call 405/375-5176.
Oklahoma Blues event a full house

On Thursday, August 29, the Oklahoma Historical Society presented an educational concert on Oklahoma and the Blues at the Oklahoma History Center. Nearly 250 OHS members watched as Dr. Harold Aldridge and Dorothy “Miss Blues” Ellis performed and discussed this American genre of music. Aldridge, originally from the all-black town of Taft, explained the roots of the Blues and how the music emerged regionally in the United States. Miss Blues began “shouting” the Blues in the 1940s. She came to Oklahoma City alone from Texas at the age of thirteen. She has sung at some of the historic venues of Oklahoma City’s Deep Deuce district. Miss Blues shared with the audience her “Texas Shout” style.

Prior to the performances a video shared music and images from Blues icons that hailed from the Sooner state. These included Jimmy Rushing, Jay McShann, Lowell Fulson, Joe Liggins, Elvin Bishop, Wayne Bennett, Jimmy Nolen, Jesse Ed Davis, and J. J. Cale.

Local barbeque establishments Leo’s, Earl’s Rib Palace, and Ned’s Catering donated samplings of their fare for attendees. Free to OHS members, this event provided well-appreciated entertainment and shared some interesting history. OHS will continue to provide its members with entertaining and educational programming tied to the history of this great state. The Oklahoma Humanities Council and the National Endowment of the Humanities also were event sponsors. Any views, findings, conclusions, or recommendations expressed in this program do not necessarily represent those of OHC or NEH.

Mysteries at the Territorial Museum

For the past several months the Oklahoma Territorial Museum in Guthrie has been involved in researching the story of Elmer McCurdy, an Oklahoma outlaw turned funhouse mummy. In October an exhibit will open that coincides with an episode of Mysteries at the Museum, on the Travel Channel. The television show and the exhibit focus on an artifact in the collection that previously was not known to have played a role in the McCurdy story.

Producers of Mysteries at the Museum approached the museum in March to see if we had any artifacts associated with Elmer McCurdy. A few things were donated in the 1990s that belonged to one of the posse members, Stringer Fenton. One of the artifacts caused us to question the myths surrounding the story. Research, research, and more research led us to discover an artifact in the museum collection that . . . well, you will just have to watch “Mysteries at the Museum” this fall or come see the exhibit for yourself to find out.

For more information on the exhibit opening or the television air date you can call 405/282-1889, email guthriecomplex@okhistory.org, or like us on Facebook.

Style show at Pawnee Bill

On October 5 at 2 p.m. the Pawnee Bill Ranch is hosting a style show, “From Titanic to World War II.” The style show is narrated by Martha Ray in the Pawnee Bill Museum conference room. The fee is $5 to attend the style show and reservations are required. To make reservations or for more information, call 918/762-2513.

Museum Store News

By Jera Winters

The Oklahoma History Center Museum Store is happy to be your source for unique items. The holidays are rapidly approaching, and we have interesting Oklahoma history and cultural gift items and books to inform and delight.

This month we are pleased to announce the addition of vintage-style tins, from Art Deco inspired tins to cool, classic cars reminiscent of Route 66, to a far out 1950s toy robot. The tins make perfect gift items for friends and family.

The tins are ready to be filled, and we’d suggest any of our great Made in Oklahoma products, such as delicious Bedre Chocolates, coffee from Rick’s Fine Coffee and Chocolates, jellies from Gigi’s Gourmet Goodies, or peanuts from the Texoma Peanut Inn.

For collectors, we have recently received the latest in the high-quality collector’s series of Painted Ponies. Painted Ponies are high quality equine figurines, each designed by a talented artist, and inspired by a theme related to life in the West. Come see the selection, including ponies designed specifically for the holidays!

Come in today and experience Oklahoma’s local flavor at the OHC Museum Store. As always, members receive a 15 percent discount on all regularly priced merchandise. Contact us at 405/522-5214 with any questions.
The Legacy of Oklahoma’s Cherokee Strip
Fall Lecture Series

The Cherokee Strip Regional Heritage Center is proud to announce a new Fall Lecture Series featuring four recognized Oklahoma historians presenting lectures in their particular area of expertise.

October 14—Exploration and the Cattle Drive Era, 1865-93
Speaker—Dr. Byron Price, director of the Charles M. Russell Center for the Study of Art of the American West, University of Oklahoma, will discuss the eastern United States’ post-Civil War demand for beef, its economic incentives, and the use of Jesse Chisholm’s trail as the principal south-to-north commercial thoroughfare.

October 21—Music and the Cowboy Culture
Speaker—Dr. Hugh Foley, Rogers State University, will discuss music of the American West, cowboy duties, character traits, ethic, work tools, music, food, culture, and historic legend.

October 28—Cherokee Strip Land Run, September 16, 1893
Speaker—Dr. Bob Blackburn, executive director of the OHS, will lectuere on the dynamics of contemporaneous economic, political, technological, and social forces; the compelling attraction for more than 100,000 homesteaders to compete for 40,000 claims; and the pioneers’ contextual demographics, character traits, incentives, motivations, and dreams.

November 4—The Legacy of Determination, Depravation and Resilience
Speaker—Dr. Kenny Brown, professor of history, University of Central Oklahoma, will cover overcoming hardscrabble challenges of subsistence to develop opportunities for success; indigenous traits of friendliness, compassion, resourcefulness, resolve, heartiness, and ambition; and notable leaders in commerce, civic affairs, the arts, government, military service, and athletics.

The lectures will be held at the Northern Oklahoma College, Enid Campus in the Gantz Center, 100 South University Avenue in Enid. The Fall Lecture Series is free to the public. For more information contact the Cherokee Strip Regional Heritage Center at 580/237-1907 or visit www.csrhc.org.

Sod House Museum to feature Jim Stout

Jim Stout will discuss a lighthearted look back at the amazing vision of Arthur Stilwell and the development of the Orient Railroad on Saturday, October 19, at 10 a.m. at the Sod House Museum. Stout’s presentation will include current photos of landmarks along the route and links to the historical record.

Arthur Stilwell was a man of vision, or it might be said of many visions. One of those visions was the Kansas City, Mexico, and Orient railroad, which had a major impact on the survival and prosperity of the towns along its route, including some in Alfalfa, Major, and Blaine counties. Stilwell envisioned it to link Kansas City to the natural ports on the west coast of Mexico and, hence, to the Orient.

Known popularly in its day as the Orient, it came about as Stilwell recovered from a different kind of vision that led to being fired despite successfully completing a railroad to the Gulf of Mexico.

Few physical traces of the Orient remain but they are there if you know where to look. Other traces are historical, revealed only after a study of the record.

Jim Stout graduated from Lambert High School and Oklahoma State University, and then pursued a fifty-year career as a photographer and journalist. He was the Bentonville reporter for the Rogers Daily News. After National Guard training he migrated to Pacific Palisades, California, the former home of Will Rogers and the home at the time of Lawrence Welk, Mel Blanc, Peter Graves, Adam West, Sylvester Stallone, and Ronald Reagan. In 1974 he purchased a camera shop and studio from Albert Bresnile, who had been the legendary personal photographer of Amelia Earhart. Jim returned to Oklahoma in 1990 and operated a portrait/wedding business in Enid for five years before accepting the editorship of the Anthony, Kansas, newspaper for six years. He also spent a year with the Blackwell newspaper and another at Alva’s Review-Courier and Newsgram before becoming “semi-retired,” driving a semi for Cantellay C2 Ranch, which is bisected by the old Orient route near Longdale.

He currently lives between Lambert and Yewed in the house built by his grandfather, C. T. Benefiel, in 1928—the year the Orient was purchased by the Atchison, Topeka, and Santa Fe Railroad Company.

The Sod House Museum is located between Aline and Cleo Springs on State Highway 8 and is open Tuesdays through Saturdays from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. with admission. For more information call Renee Trindle at 580/463-2441 or email sodhouse@okhistory.org.

Oklahoma Banking History Book
On October 15 the University of Oklahoma Press will release Banking in Oklahoma Before Statehood, written by Michael Hightower, researcher for the Oklahoma Bank and Commerce History Project.

This lively book takes Oklahoma history into the world of Wild West capitalism. It begins with a useful survey of banking from the early days of the American republic until commercial patterns coalesced in the East. It then follows the course of American expansion westward, tracing the evolution of commerce and banking in Oklahoma from their genesis to the eve of statehood in 1907.

To tell this story, the author blends documentary historical research in both public and corporate archives with his own interviews and those that WPA field-workers conducted with old-timers during the New Deal. The road to Oklahoma statehood was paved during the Gilded Age, when money decided elections all over the country. Bankers were never far from the main action during the territorial period, and the institutions they built were both cause and effect of Oklahoma’s inclusion in national networks of banking and commerce.

Banking in Oklahoma Before Statehood (cloth, $29.95) will be available after October 15 in the OHS Museum Store. To purchase, come to the store, call 405/522-5214 or email giftshop@okhistory.org. For more information, visit the University of Oklahoma Press at www.oup.com and click on the fall 2013 catalog.

Publication of Banking in Oklahoma Before Statehood and its sequel, Banking in Oklahoma, 1907-2000 (OU Press, 2014) coincides with the OHS’s major exhibit Crossroads of Commerce, slated to open at the Oklahoma History Center in fall 2014. A third book, Banking in Oklahoma by Region, remains a work in process and will likely be completed in 2015.

Dr. Hightower plans to travel throughout the state in 2014 to discuss the historic role of banks as crossroads of communities. To schedule a visit to your community or to offer suggestions for research on banking and commerce in your part of the state, please contact him by phone at 434/249-6043 or email mhighower@okhistory.org.
Doaksville Candlelight Tour

Come to the Doaksville Candlelight Tour to experience southeastern Oklahoma’s rich history. On October 18 and 19 experience a walking historical candlelight tour of Doaksville, the first capital of the Choctaw Nation, including a group of scenes depicting the early years of the town. Visitors will take a hayride through the historic Fort Towson/Doaksville cemetery and then be escorted on a walking tour of Doaksville, interacting with reenactors at several stops in the townsite. Each scene will entertain and inform visitors of historical events that took place at this site. This year’s tour will be devoted to Doaksville’s role in the Civil War. This tour is a family friendly experience. The first tours start at 6:30 p.m. and will repeat every forty-five minutes until 10 p.m. on both nights. Reservations are preferred. To make a reservation please contact Fort Towson Historic Site at 580/873-2634 or email jdavis@okhistory.org. Doaksville is located next to Fort Towson at HC 63 Box 1580 in Fort Towson, Oklahoma. Call for directions.

Join the Oklahoma History Center and explore the meaning behind historic gravestones on Saturday, October 26. Gravestones and cemeteries are rich in a language of symbols. Those symbols can be difficult to interpret because of changes in meaning over time. By examining grave markers one can learn more than just the person’s name. This class will provide the skills necessary to investigate the past through tombstones. The class will run from 1 to 3 p.m. and is free with museum admission. Registration is required. For more information or to register, please contact Jason Harris at jharris@okhistory.org or by phone at 405/522-0785.
