Federal Archives and Records Center – Fort Worth, TX – Records of the Bureau of Indian Affairs Group 75: Records of the Osage Agency – Records Relating to Payments and Trust Fund Management (1 of 6)

The distribution of money and supplies in accordance with the provisions of various treaties was one of the primary responsibilities of the Osage agent during the 19th century. An act of Congress, approved June 28, 1906 (34 Stat. 539), and subsequent legislation provided for the supervision of the expenditure of funds held in trust for the Osages. The chief clerk of the Osage Agency was generally responsible for supervising activities relating to the receipt and disbursement of “Individual Indian Money” and trust funds. An Individual Indian Accounts Section was established within the Administrative Division of 1925. Various units within the Welfare Division exercised some supervision over the financial affairs of restricted Osages.

◆ Osage Record of Deaths: 1906-1912

- Entries in the volume are arranged alphabetically by surname of the deceased. A record of the names of deceased annuitants. The information given for each individual includes date of death, annuity number, and allotment number

◆ Osage Heirship Records: 1906-1912

- A handwritten record of the division of the “headright shares” of deceased allottees. Information about each deceased Osage is entered on a separate page and includes the deceased’s name, allotment number, date of death, names of heirs and the percentage of the headright share received by each, and the heir’s relationship to the deceased. The volume contains an alphabetical index to the names of the deceased.

National Archives Roll 7RA198.1

Federal Archives and Records Center – Fort Worth, TX – Records of the Bureau of Indian Affairs Group 75: Records of the Osage Agency – Records of the Osage Allotting Commission (1 of 2)

The Osage Allotting Commission was organized on Aug. 14, 1906, in accordance with an act of Congress of June 28, 1906 (34 Stat. 339) which provided for allotting land in severalty to the members of the Osage tribe. The three member commission supervised surveys of the Osage reservation, investigated claims of fraudulent enrollment, and conducted hearings on contested allotments. Each of the 2230 individuals listed on the Osage tribal roll approved by the secretary of Interior on Apr. 1, 1908, selected three 140 acre tracts. The remaining unallotted land was divided equally among the 2230 enrolled members of the tribe which provided each individual with a total allotment of approximately 657 acres. On Mar. 31, 1909, the commission was abolished by the Secretary of Interior who directed the superintendent of the Osage Agency to take custody of the records and complete any unfinished business. See entry 610 of Preliminary Inventory 163 for reports of the commission and related enrollment records.

◆ Osage Allotment Roll

◆ Osage Allotment Ledgers: 1907

- There is one volume for full-blood Osages and one for mixed-bloods. The names of full-bloods are arranged by band and the names of mixed-bloods are arranged alphabetically. The volume containing the names of full-bloods includes an index to the names of children whose names do not appear in alphabetical order because they are listed with a guardian.

- A record of Osages eligible for allotments. The information for each allottee includes name, allotment number, gender, age, relationship to the head of the household, and occasionally the legal description of the land allotted as their first selection.

National Archives Roll 7RA201.1

Federal Archives and Records Center – Fort Worth, TX – Records of the Bureau of Indian Affairs Group 75: Records of the Osage Agency – Records of the Land and Realty Division Survey Field Notes, 1870 (1 of 7)

The Osages purchased the Land for their reservation from the Cherokees in 1872 with title held by the United States in trust for the entire tribe. Although individual ownership of Land was not authorized until the allotment act of June 28, 1906 (34 Stat. 539), Osages were encouraged in 1890 to file claims to 160 acre homesteads. By 1894, the majority of the land on the reservation had been claimed and it had become common practice for Osages to rent their Land to white farmers in exchange for a portion of the crops raised. In 1902, a “division” consisting of several fulltime clerks was established within the agency to supervise leasing operations. This unit increased in size and assumed new functions as a result of the allotment act of 1906 which also authorized the sale of “surplus land” under regulations prescribed by the Department of Interior. The designation of the unit responsible for transactions involving real property varied periodically until 1942 when a Land and realty Division was established. This division supervised the sale and exchange of property and the issuance of leases, provided assistance in the payment of taxes, coordinated the issuance of insurance, and participated in suits to partition property. The records described below have been grouped by function or type rather than by the name of the unit responsible for their creation.

◆ Field Survey Notes: 1870

- Arranged numerically by number of the range located east of the Indian Meridian and thereunder by township number.
- Handwritten copies of notes taken by surveyors for the General Land Office, Department of Interior, who surveyed the Lands north of the Canadian River and east of the Indian Meridian in the Indian Territory. The surveyed lands were located in townships 11-29 north, ranges 1-12 east, and eventually became the reservation of the Osage tribe who were moved from Kansas to northern part of the Indian Territory in 1871. The only information given for each land subdivision is the legal description of the land (range, township, section, and degrees), unusual landmarks, and a brief abstract of the land’s condition and types of trees located within the surveyed area.

FBI File on the Osage Indian Murders Roll 1

Publisher's Note: This material has been reproduced in the exact order in which it was released by the Federal Bureau of Investigation (1 of 3)

Introduction

Osage Indians, a remarkable people, wisely used the economic base of various localities during several generations following their nineteenth-century removal from the rich alluvial lands of the Mississippi-Arkansas confluence. By the early twentieth century, situated in the cross-timber zone of northeastern Oklahoma, Osage people developed the cattle-grazing and oil-drilling potential of their latest in a series of estates. As did the oil, headright royalties flowed while Osage Indians tried, in a variety of ways, to adapt to the demands of the new order. In time, these Native American people became victims of plots to divert the wealth of their nation.

Exact counts are difficult to derive, but during the early 1920s it was estimated that somewhere between a dozen to two dozen Osage Indians were murdered or simply "disappeared." As wards of the federal government, their special status brought investigators from the Federal Bureau of Investigation. It soon became apparent that Osage fears, widely shared among friendly whites, virtually dried up knowledgeable sources. Moreover, Oklahoma county and state officials initially were reluctant to cooperate with federal investigators. In what became one of its most celebrated cases, the FBI – then simply the Bureau of Investigation – avidly pursued the Osage murderers, eventually securing life-term convictions in state and federal courts.

The FBI's Osage Indian murders files contain stores of data about life and attitude of Osage Indians and their neighbors during the 1920s. The impact of oil wealth on northeastern Oklahoma is clearly documented. Of equal interest is the operation of state and federal law enforcement agencies in an era when, many assume, gangsters and bootleggers in major cities were society's sole villains. It is also evident from the Osage Indian Murders files that the FBI at all levels – especially including the you director, J. Edgar Hoover – acutely sensed heinous injustice and were determined to persevere in what became a most difficult task of investigation and prosecution. Sandbagged in a host of brazen but ingenious ways, the FBI nonetheless persisted, fought, and defeated charges of improper procedure and broke the congenial bonds of frontier silence to win convictions.

Scholars of the Osage people, modern Oklahoma, or early twentieth-century politics and law enforcement will find compelling source material in the FBI's Osage Indian Murders files. An even wider audience will find in these explicit and well-ordered documents a first-rate murder mystery, solved through unusual combinations of stealth, wisdom, and dedication – in short, one of the most exciting yet demanding murder investigations ever operated by the Federal Bureau of Investigation!

Roughly, the Osage Indian Murders files are half investigatory, half prosecutor. For the most part, documents bearing on investigation activities precede those related to various aspects of prosecution. At the front of these files is a short compendium of newspaper clippings about the murders and the FBI's role in these cases. Most clippings are from Oklahoma newspapers; some are from Washington, DC, newspapers. The final section of the files contains correspondence and other material dealing with radio, film, and other popular communications forms as they worked with the FBI to acquaint the public with this unusual story. Field reports; internal correspondence and memoranda; correspondence with the Commissioner of Indian Affairs, Justice Department officers, and Oklahoma state officials; witness profiles and associated prosecution documents; and other matter related to investigation and prosecution form the bulk of the FBI's Osage Indian Murders files
